The state of the s

rome has taken a fall out of Murby. Pooh! What Jerome did wasn't istance to what McGovern did

HERE is a terrible rattling of now. Terry McGovern his way out of the tomb so fully that others who have been been working out in the country, re there are to white lights to side, and he says he is "there." and he says he is "there." and the says he is "there." and the says he is "there he put in six months of muscle and re building training. Erne is "there," and he wants a chance with that ilar entertainer, Mr. Nelson. In Erne could give the Battler one of most interesting six-round scraps in experience.

This a Bad Move.

ERRY'S managerial staff has arranged to put Terry on the stage matter of such importance. Terry has made a great start on the new up-hill cilmb, and it was the stage and nothing else that nearly put a marble monument over Terry's fighting record. He rought to be kept as far from the footlights as possible. He should be taken out into the country for a month and the given a chance to get back to his trest condition through hard work. He will need all of that if he bucks up against the Battling Dane, or Young Corpett, either.

But Terry would have a chance with Nelson. Anybody with his punch has a chance with any little fellow in the game. Terry can hand out a knockout as well es ever. Nelson has a good jaw, but it isn't lined with steel, and he can be put away by the right punch as well as the rest of 'em.

LL sorts of possibilities have opened before Terrible Terry McGovern. The great little metr's wonderful return to fighting me almost like a resurrection from grave, has made him peer of Battar Melson in public interest. On the level, it looked foolish. Finally the New Yorkers got a good running start and kicked the ball down toward the English goal. Suddenly a young Irishman named Gorman got a good clean wallop and, "Bing" his foot struck the ball and shot by Sir Charles Fitzsatrick's head like a buckshot and New York had scored. The crowd cheered lively and Sir Charles, the goal keeper, merely smiled and said: "Very clevah, very clevah, and the scored ry cleval, and the scored ry cleval the sum of the sum merely smiled and said: "Very clevah, very clevah."

The Englishmen were evidently the best players for they kept the ball almost continually in the New York territory. The foreigners were good on "dribbling," that is, they would follow the ball along and nurse it with their feet, until some fellow would get a chance for a kick. By this system the Britons got the ball down the field until J. Bryning came up and socked it through goal keeper Craig for another score. England 3, New York 1.
